The New York Journal learns from the former manager of George L. Fox, the clown, one of the pantomimists' face has become so inflamed, as that he is no longer able to feel his facial muscles, and therefore was obliged to put the stage. It has been Mr. Fox's wont to plaster his face nightly with paste of French chalk, bismuth, and cold cream. Physicians warned him against the bismuth. Fox did not believe that he could be hurt by

The Duke and Duchess of Edinburgh were married at St. Petersburg on the 23rd of January, 1846, and their first child, a son, was born on the 26th of October last year. The birth of a daughter to the Duke of Edinburgh increases the number of Queen Victoria's grand-children to twenty-seven, of whom twenty-four are still living. Altogether the Queen has now fifty-three children and grandchildren living. Three of her children are not yet married, while one of those married, the Princess Louise, has yet without a family.

Vikings, says of the author of "Alcega underland." His name is Halgson Rev. Lars Ludwig Hlgson. He is a youngest son, young man, with a pleasant, earnest face, a little like a boy, but rather small than, and so shy and modest that his own friends had met him in Wonder, and he would be said in her simple way: "Oh, don't say so; everything and everybody are so very large that you'll be quite uncomfortable! You understand them at all, sir. I'm sure you do."
